THE CHURCH OF ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

At the time of the Survey there had just been a change of ordained leadership, and the new rector had not really had an opportunity to become acquainted with the parish, having assumed his position following upon the lengthy tenure of his predecessor. The data submitted for the census are far less adequate than could be desired, and the General Division of Research and Field Study is reluctant to place much dependence upon them as representing the present life of the congregation or its potential for ministry. The following brief report is based primarily upon data available from the Diocesan Journals and from the United States Census Bureau publications. It is strongly urged that the congregation undertake a complete self-examination, possibly along the lines suggested by the Diocesan Survey, in order that long-range plans for the future of the parish may be established. The area around St. John's is one in which the Church has a strong potential as well as an enormous challenge. It is hoped that the congregation will be in a position to work closely with the diocese as that ministry is developed.

The property of the congregation of St. John the Evangelist is at the corner of Third and Reid Streets and consists of a large nave, with a seating capacity of 400 persons on the second floor of a building which contains parish hall facilities on the ground floor as well as in the rear of the building. The structure is reported to be in fair condition, but it needs extensive refurbishing in order to make it attractive and fully useable. A question is raised as to the soundness of the balcony. The rectory is also reported to be in good condition.

houses predominate, most being occupied by single-families, although some sub-division has taken place during recent years. The neighborhood is a fairly stable one in many respects.

Philadelphia has been divided into numerous tracts by the United States Census Bureau and for the purposes of this Survey, the tract in which the church buildings are located, 1-B, and the seven adjacent census tracts have been designated as the parish area. Information concerning population changes and characteristics of those eight tracts may be found in the following tables. It should be realized that the data are drawn from the 1960 census, and may be somewhat out of date. The first table shows a considerable loss of population in the area between 1950 and 1960 and also shows the generally older population, in terms of having a sizeable proportion of adults between the ages of 20 and 65, with relatively few youngsters, except in Census Tract 1-A, which has a small population, and in Census Tract 39-A which has an even smaller population.

Census Tract	Population		% Change	% 14 & Under	% 65 & Over
	1950	1960
1-A	589	397	-32.5	31.5	8.3

39-C	21,386	18,671	-12.7	26.8	9.8
Total	92,042	72,683	-21.0

The next tract gives information on the education of adults who were aged 25 or more as of 1960. The median education refers to the number of years of formal school completed by those adults.

The following table gives information on the very unequal distribution of the non-white population. It also gives information as to the proportion of the 1960 population which was living in the same house in 1960 as in 1955. That proportion is remarkably high for most tracts.

The next table gives information on the relative strength of the Episcopal Church and of the Church of St. John the Evangelist. The table is a result of compilation of the membership maps submitted by churches throughout the diocese. As the table is studied a question should be raised as to the accuracy of the St. John's figures, reporting as they do an even 200 persons in Census Tract 1-B, an even 300 in Census Tract 39-B, with very few people reported in surrounding census tracts. Such a distribution of members is unusual, though certainly not impossible. It also should be borne in mind that the Episcopal Church throughout Philadelphia reaches people equal in number to 2.0% of the 1960 population.

THE CHURCH PROGRAM

The Church Self-Study Form which was submitted for the Church of St. John the Evangelist was incompletely filled out, to the extent that very few observations based upon the data contained in it can be made. The congregation is strongly urged to fill out a similar report for its own benefit, raising questions as to the whys and wherefores for every question and the answers to them. If the congregation wishes to submit a completed questionnaire, the General Division of Research and Field Study will analyze it as time is available.

III. HISTORY OF THE CONGREGATION

Please write out a short history of this congregation. How was the work started? Give the important dates and events.

The church began about 1912 when Rev. H. Cresson McHenry, then superintendent of P. E. City Mission, voluntarily and without remuneration came down as Missionary-in-charge. Through his efforts the congregation grew from 7 communicants to the working group we now have today. The congregation consists mainly of non-professional salaried workers. This congregation celebrated the 100th anniversary of the building of St. John's in 1954

REPORTED MEMBERSHIP FROM MAPS

The membership map submitted by the congregation of the Church of St. John the Evangelist shows the places of residence of 518 persons. As has been noted earlier, 200 members are reported as living in Census Tract 1-B, in which the church buildings are located, while 300 persons are reported as living in Census Tract 39-B, the tract just to the south of 1-B. The remaining 18 persons are spotted close to those two census tracts, for the most part, although one person is reported as living in West Philadelphia. A question should be raised concerning the apparent discrepancy between the 518 persons reported on the map and the 932 persons reported in the Diocesan Journal for 1962, the last for which figures were available, and the figures in the Church Self-Study Form which list a total of 600 confirmed persons.

REPORTED MEMBERSHIP AND FINANCIAL DATA FROM JOURNALS

The incomplete nature of the report submitted to the diocese for 1963, and a question as to the accuracy of the figures reporting the communicant strength from 1960 through 1962, suggest that interpretation of the membership and financial statistics would have little validity. It may be noted that from 1961 through 1963, the Church of St. John the Evangelist set aside 12.1% of its total reported expenditures for work outside of the parish. That figure should be compared with the ratio of 8.1% reported for the churches of South Philadelphia as a whole, the ratio of 12.2% for the City of Philadelphia churches, and the ratio of 14.9% for the churches of the diocese.

ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST CHURCH, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

The material received for the Diocesan Survey from the Church of St. John the Evangelist was apparently hurriedly and incompletely prepared. No Episcopal Census was received, the Church Self-Study Form was approximately one-third completed, and the membership map appears to contain generalizations in its compilations. Because of the less than adequate nature of the submitted material, no summary or suggestions can be made concerning the Church of St. John the Evangelist. That situation is regrettable, especially in view of the importance which the congregation and the property can play in the general planning for effective work by the Church in the neighborhood.
